

THE FORGOTTEN FORTY IN FOCUS:
WHY WE THOUGHT RTX'S SHARE
PRICE WOULD TAKE OFF

CATALYST-DRIVEN INVESTMENTS THAT DELIVER

Each year, The Forgotten Forty highlights 40 companies we believe have significant potential for capital appreciation. RTX Corporation (RTX), featured in our 2024 edition, is an aerospace and defense powerhouse comprising Collins Aerospace, Pratt & Whitney, and Raytheon.

RTX stock fell out of favor in late 2023 due to a recall of one of its major commercial aircraft engine programs, projected to reduce free cash flow by $3 billion over several years. While Wall Street focused on the problem's scale, our analysis identified it as a fixable issue that RTX had the resources to address. Despite this, the stock shed ~$27 billion in market capitalization—a reaction we viewed as far overblown. This mispricing created, in our view, a timely opportunity. As noted in last year's report:

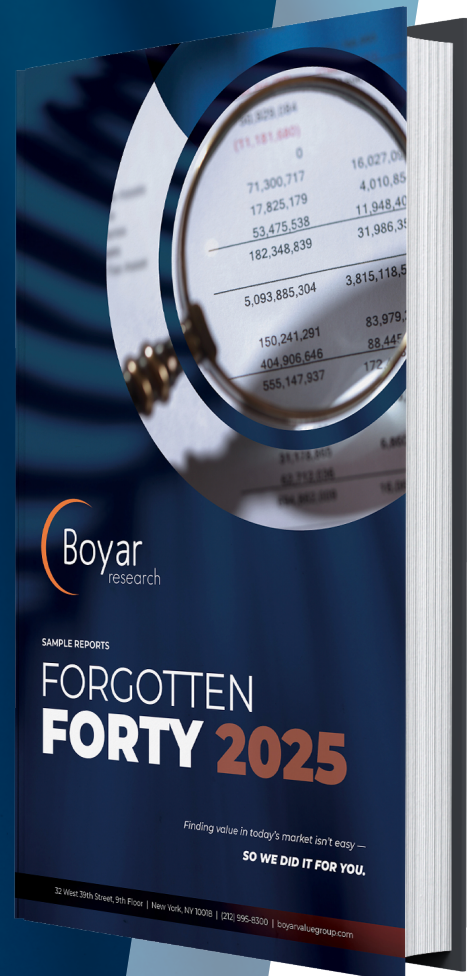

"WHILE THIS RECALL IS SIGNIFICANT, IT IS NOT FINANCIALLY INSURMOUNTABLE. MANAGEMENT ASSERTS (ACCURATELY, WE BELIEVE) THAT [THESE ENGINE PROGRAM] PROBLEMS 'IN NO WAY' IMPACT ITS ABILITY TO PAY THE DIVIDEND. RTX SHARES ARE MORE THAN 20% BELOW THEIR 52-WEEK HIGH AND TRADE AT JUST ~15X 2024E EPS, MAKING RTX ARGUABLY THE LEAST EXPENSIVE PRIME DEFENSE CONTRACTOR AND ITS PRICE ATTRACTIVE [CONSIDERING] ITS DURABLE MOAT, GROWTH OUTLOOK, AND FINANCIAL POSITION."

Our analysis proved correct. RTX raised its quarterly dividend by 7% earlier this year, and strong fundamentals drove P/E multiple expansion from 15x to 21x. Since last year's Forgotten Forty, RTX shares have soared 40%,* outperforming all other publicly traded prime defense contractors.

RTX is just one example of the value delivered through The Forgotten Forty. Preorder this year's edition to receive 25% off and discover what we believe are 40 of the best investment opportunities for 2025. As a bonus, you'll receive our November 2024 issue of Boyar Research, containing three additional in-depth reports on undervalued companies with compelling catalysts for capital appreciation.
